

Art, Social Work, and Social Change

Leanne Schubert

BSW, Grad Dip. (Cultural Heritage Studies)

A thesis submitted for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy (Social Work)
University of Newcastle

School of Humanities and Social Science

January 2012

Declaration

This thesis contains no material which has been accepted for the award of any other degree or diploma in any university or other tertiary institution and, to the best of my knowledge and belief, contains no material previously published or written by another person, except where due reference has been made in the text. I give consent to this copy of my thesis, when deposited in the University Library, being made available for loan and photocopying subject to the provisions of the Copyright Act 1968.

I hereby certify that the work embodied in this thesis contains published papers and scholarly work of which I am a joint author. I have included as part of the thesis a written statement, endorsed by my supervisor, attesting to my contribution to the joint publication and scholarly work.

Signed:.....

Date:.....

Dedication

In memory of my youngest sister

Aileen

who died during the intervention phase of this study and continues to inspire me to live with integrity and courage

Acknowledgements

The conduct of research is never a solo venture and the study on which this thesis rests was a highly collaborative community effort, and would not have been possible without significant contributions of many people. I owe a great deal of thanks and gratitude to those who have been part of its creation.

First, and significantly, I am indebted to each and every one of the community members across the Cessnock LGA who participated in the ‘Safe at Home’ project. Over one hundred community members were involved as research participants in this study and their contribution was essential to the creation of the artworks on which this thesis is based. My appreciation is extended to each participant.

Enormous thanks go to my past and present colleagues from the Cessnock Anti Violence Network who invited me to engage with them and our community in making art which might begin to address domestic and family violence. I am grateful for their willingness to join with me in research, try this brave experiment, work alongside me, and have faith that something would emerge. Appreciation is also due to the other human service agencies beyond the Network involved in the study. Most notably, thanks go to the staff and trainees of Northnet (Green Jobs Corps Australia) for their work on the construction aspects of the Hopscotch and Snakes and Ladders installations and the staff and clients of the Personal Helpers and Mentors program, Aftercare Maitland who scraped and tiled with passion. Recognition and thanks are also conveyed to the volunteers of Cessnock District Hospital Pink Ladies and Koe-Nara Schools as Communities Centre, for the hours spent folding surveys and packaging envelopes for the community-wide survey.

Grateful acknowledgement is made of the funding bodies whose financial contribution enabled the intervention phase of this study – the conduct of the ‘Safe at Home’ project: The Australia Council for the Arts, The University of Newcastle Strategic Pilot Grants (the Schools of Humanities and Social Sciences, and Fine Art, Drama and Music), Cessnock Anti Domestic Violence Network, CDSE (Clubs NSW), and Housing NSW, Maitland. Without this financial support this research would not have been possible.

To The University of Newcastle Fine Art Students who contributed their art making skill and expertise to the project, and in so doing taught me new skills, I am most grateful. Particular thanks go to Vicki Sienzcuk, Caroline Hale, Betty Saez and Nerida Ackland for their contributions. Gratitude is extended to Duncan Bond for his assistance in drawing the plan for the Snakes and ladders mosaic. Thanks are also extended to Scott Reeves for his skill, patience and generosity of spirit in working under an exceptionally hot Australian summer sun to guide the laying of the Snakes and ladders mosaic. His care and attention ensured a beautifully finished artwork.

Guided by the stars of Taurus I was fortunate to have had two of the most amazing women supervise this thesis. Words on paper seem inadequate thanks for the support, guidance and wisdom shared by Mel Gray and Anne Graham. Born on the same day but with extraordinarily different styles, they stretched me in all directions, and were quintessential to this thesis becoming a reality.

My thanks to Mel for maintaining a profound interest in this area of research, her ability to challenge me theoretically and conceptually, for teaching me to begin to write and find creative ways to get me to do so, her precise attention to detail and meticulous editing, and for sharing her passion for photography. All of this and more helped me in the journey from practitioner to scholar for which I am deeply grateful.

My thanks to Anne for nurturing my art instinct by providing opportunities to see new things and develop new art making skills. Thanks are also due to her, and her extended network of colleagues and friends, for their contribution to making the artworks. I am most gratified for her recognition that what I do is art, and her encouragement of me to build an identity as an artist.

I am grateful to my colleagues and friends who form the Social Work RHD group for their friendship and support. They generously shared ideas and their knowledge throughout the challenges and joys of completing a PhD and ensured the journey was not one I took alone.

A special thanks goes to my friends and colleagues Jessica Grant and Angela Philp for their critical readings of, and helpful contributions to this thesis. I am grateful to them both for finding time for me in their busy schedules.

Wholehearted thanks and love go to my family and friends who have extended their love and support – including folding surveys, attending events and working on the mosaics – to me throughout the life of this study. Each of you have been there from beginning to end, continued to play an important part in my life and helped remind me there is so much more to life than doing a PhD. I look forward to taking up my post PhD life with each of you.

Finally and most importantly, thanks goes to my partner Col, who graciously tolerated the tears, tantrums, and sleepless nights that went with this thesis and the many ups and downs of life that occurred during the time that it has taken to complete. His steadfast love and unwavering belief in me continues to astound me. No words are adequate thanks for the man who is and remains the love of my life.

Publications originating from this research

- Schubert, L. (2006). Is social work art, or is art social work? International Journal of Humanities. Vol. 4. Commonground Publishers.
- Gray, M., & Schubert, L. (2007). Place, space and spirit: Imagining the everyday. The International Journal of Arts in Society, Vol. 1. Commonground Publishers.
- Gray, M., & Schubert, L. (2009). Knowledge, experience and art in an innovative community-based study. Paper presented at the Experiential Knowledge Special Interest Group 2009: Experiential knowledge, method & methodology, London. <http://www.experientialknowledge.org/>
- Gray, M., & Schubert, L. (2010). Turning base metal into gold: Transmuting art, practice, research, and experience into knowledge. British Journal of Social Work 40 (7), 2308-2325 first published online April 1, 2010. doi:10.1093/bjsw/bcq047.
- Schubert, L. (2011). Looking for leverage – glimpsing inclusion: A critical review of a community art project against principles of inclusion. Paper presented at and included in the refereed conference proceedings of the inaugural Leveraging potential: Social inclusion at work and play conference, Prato, Italy.
- Schubert, L. (2011). The ‘Safe at Home’ project: A process record in pictures. Volume 1. Newcastle: Author. Available at <http://www.blurb.com/books/2383028>
- Schubert, L. (2011). The ‘Safe at Home’ project: A process record in pictures. Volume 2. Newcastle: Author. Available at <http://www.blurb.com/books/2382799>

Conference presentations originating from this research

- Gray, M., & Schubert, L. (2006). Place, space and spirit: Imagining the everyday. Hunter Association of Counsellors and Therapists (HAFCAT), Newcastle, 17 May.
- Schubert, L. (2006). Is social work art, or is art social work? Presentation at the 4th International Conference on New Directions in Humanities, Tunis, Tunisia, 3-6 July.
- Gray, M., & Schubert, L. (2006). Place, space and spirit: Imagining the everyday. Presentation at the 1st International Conference on Arts in Society, Edinburgh, Scotland, 15-18 August.
- Schubert, L. (2006). Nature, nurture and narratives: The art of self care. Presentation at the 1st International Conference on Arts in Society, Edinburgh, Scotland, 15-18 August.
- Schubert, L. (2008). Safe at Home: Using art to build community awareness of domestic violence. Presentation to the Hunter Means Innovation Festival, Newcastle May 10.
- Graham, A., & Schubert, L. (2008). Safe at Home: "An interdisciplinary project." Presented at The University of Newcastle, Drama Fine Art and Music Research Opportunities Workshop, Newcastle, 1-2 December.
- Gray, M., & Schubert, L. (2008). Safe at Home: Using art to build community awareness of domestic violence. Presentation at the Safe Communities Conference, Christchurch, New Zealand, 20-23 October.
- Gray, M., Graham, A. & Schubert, L. (2009). Knowledge, experience and art in an innovative community-based study. Presented at Experiential Knowledge, Method and Methodology, The International Conference of the Design Research Society, Special Interest Group on Experiential Knowledge, London Metropolitan University, London. 19 June.
- Gray, M., Schubert, L. & Graham, A. (2009). Turning water into wine: Distilling art, practice and experience into knowledge. Presented at the 4th International Conference on Arts in Society, Venice, Italy, 28-31 July.

- Graham, A., Schubert, L., & Gray, M. (2009). Oh what a tangled web we weave: Art, community and collaboration in the public domain. Presented at the 4th International Conference on Arts in Society, Venice, Italy, 28-31 July.
- Schubert, L., Gray, M., & Graham, A. (2009). Enhancing awareness through arts-based community development: 'Safe at Home' and beyond. Magical realism? Presented at the 4th International Conference on Arts in Society, Venice, Italy, 28-31 July.
- Schubert, L. (2010). Art and social work in the changing social landscape: Crisis? What crisis? Presented at the International 'Social Work & Society' Academy – 8th Annual PhD Network and Plenum (TiSSA 2010): Social work in times of crisis. What can social work deliver – and who benefits? Tallinn, Estonia, 22-27 August.
- Schubert, L. (2011). Embracing the art of social work: Visualising alternate identities. Presented at the International 'Social Work & Society' Academy – 9th Annual PhD Network and Plenum (TiSSA 2011): Politics of identity – The changing face of social work. Hradec Králové, Czech Republic, 21-26 August.
- Schubert, L. (2011). Looking for leverage – Glimpsing inclusion: A critical review of a community art project against principles of inclusion. Presented at the inaugural Leveraging Potential: Social Inclusion at Work and Play conference. Prato, Italy, 9-12 October.

Artworks and exhibitions originating from this research

Permanent public installation works

Hopscotch. (2010). The Cottage, 58 Alkira Avenue, East Cessnock (premises owned by Housing NSW), ground mosaic.

Respect. (2011). The Cottage, 58 Alkira Avenue, East Cessnock (premises owned by Housing NSW), wall mosaic.

Snakes and ladders. (2011). Alkira Avenue Park, East Cessnock, ground mosaic.

Exhibitions

Collage. (2007). Watt Space, Newcastle. November 21–December 9. (Group exhibition of Second Year BFA Students, The University of Newcastle).

White Ribbon Day: The cut out project. (2008). Peace Park, Weston. November 25.

Domestic & family violence – Stop! I don't like it. (2008–2009). Centrelink, Koe-Nara Schools as Community Centre, Cessnock Family Support Service and Cessnock City Library. 1 December – 30 January (across rotating venues).

A fine line: Artists respond to the theme of pleasure and pain and the often fine line between. (2009). Podspace, Newcastle. October 7–24. (Group exhibition held in association with the Arts Health Conference #2, 7 – 9 October, Newcastle City Hall, Newcastle).

Suggested pathway for reading this thesis

This thesis consists of three primary modules: this tract and two volumes of visual process record which document the intervention aspects of the nested empirical component of this study called the ‘Safe at Home’ project. It tested the effectiveness of art as an intervention to raise awareness of and address negative attitudes toward domestic and family violence. It incorporated eight arts-based community development interventions including events, posters and coasters, cut outs, and several permanent public mosaic works. To orient and assist the reader through the various components of this thesis the following pathway is recommended:

1. Begin with the abstract.
2. Browse the two volumes of The ‘Safe at Home’ project: A process record in pictures (available at <http://www.blurb.com/books/2383028> and <http://www.blurb.com/books/2382799>) for an orientation to the artworks completed in the intervention phase of the empirical study. The reader is encouraged to return to specific aspects of these volumes at relevant points within the thesis text.
3. For an orientation to the whole study the introduction provides an overview and outlines the component parts, mapping the whereabouts of the key elements within the thesis.
4. These steps will provide a context for the discussion and conclusion if the reader prefers to begin at the end.
5. Throughout the text the reader is directed to supplementary material and examples of work located in the Appendices. The reader is encouraged to refer to these as they arise.
6. For a sequential reading of the theoretical and conceptual aspects of the study it is recommended the reader pursue the remainder of the text in the following order:
 1. Literature review (Chapters 2 to 5).
 2. Methodology (Chapters 6 and 7).

3. Findings (Chapters 8, 9 and 10).
4. References.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Declaration	3
Dedication	5
Acknowledgements	7
Publications originating from this research	10
Conference presentations originating from this research	12
Artworks and exhibitions originating from this research	14
Suggested pathway for reading this thesis	15
Abstract	23
Chapter 1	24
Introduction	24
The dominant story of social work	30
The divide between art and science	31
Beginnings of a preferred story: Arguing for art and science	34
Continuing the preferred story: Leaning toward art	35
Chapter 2	39
What is Art?	39
Problems in defining art in social work	41
Looking to science to explain art	48
Is social work art according to Dutton's criteria?	54
Direct pleasure	55
Skill and virtuosity	56
Style	57
Novelty and creativity	58
Criticism	59
Representation	60
Special focus	61
Expressive individuality	62
Emotional saturation	62
Intellectual challenge	63
Art traditions and institutions	64
Imaginative experience	65
Conclusion: So does social work measure up?	66
Chapter 3	68
Locating Social Work in Art?	68
Locating social work within art	69
The shared territory and its implications for practice	90
Chapter 4	96
Locating Art in Social Work	96
Chronological and thematic history	97
Values and art	102
Philosophy and art	103
Practice and art	106
Artistry in social work practice	107
Social work as artful practice	108
Personal approach: Art as the use of self	110
Personal qualities and style	112
(Rational-)technical approach: Art as skill	113
Attempts to name discrete skills that constitute art	114
Performance skills	116
Creative skills	117
Instrumental approach: Art as a medium or method	123
Interpretive approach: Art as communication	130
Communication and meaningful relationships	131
Communication as meaning-making	132
Transformative approach: Art as social change	133
Artful practice as social change	135
Conclusion	138

Chapter 5	140
Community: A Place of Cathexis	140
Community from a historical perspective	143
Issues surrounding Australian community development	146
Personal experience shapes ‘community’	151
Interdisciplinarity shapes ‘community’	151
Art and community	152
Community cultural development	153
Arts-based community development	156
Challenges of arts-based community development	160
Power interests	160
Resource intensiveness	160
Romanticism	161
Methodological, quantification, and evaluation issues	161
Risk	162
Partnership and collaboration	163
Conclusion	163
Chapter 6	165
Methodology	165
Research and its relationship to social work and art	166
Methodological framework for the study	173
Phase 1: Problem formulation and research design	182
Heuristic approach and social work	182
Heuristic approach and art	183
Researcher’s initial idea: Relationship between art and social work (A1)	185
Development of ideas through conversation (B1)	186
Search for relevant literature and research (B3)	187
InSight: Mapping ideas across disciplinary boundaries (B4)	188
Capturing emergent ideas and artworks (B5)	192
Testing research questions in a community context (B6)	194
Establishing validity in heuristic research (B7)	194
Testing art making methods, media, and skills (A4)	195
Determining the methodological framework for the nested empirical study (A5)	196
Phase 3: Analysis and interpretation of the data	196
Qualitative data analysis	196
Stage 1: Familiarisation	197
Stage 2: Identifying a thematic framework	197
Stage 3: Indexing	197
Stage 4: Charting and interpretation	198
Quantitative data analysis	198
Surveying attitudes	198
Phase 4: Dissemination	199
Successfully completed conference presentations, exhibitions, and journal publications (B9)	199
Conclusion	199
Chapter 7	200
Phase 2: ‘Safe at Home’	200
Cessnock Local Government Area	201
Stage 1: Problem formulation and research design	203
Cessnock Anti Violence Network and the ‘Safe at Home’ project (C1)	203
Aims, objectives, and rationale for the ‘Safe at Home’ (C2)	205
Social intervention research: Research–intervention–research	207
Methodological framework for ‘Safe at Home’ (A5)	207
Methodology in practice	214
Context of domestic and family violence (C4)	215
Funding the ‘Safe at Home’ project (C5)	218
Ensuring safe, ethical conduct of the research (C6)	218
Ethical issues arising during the project	219
Confidentiality	219

Participant consent	220
Working with children	220
Managing the dynamics of community	221
Dual roles	222
Establishing criteria and standards of judgement for ‘Safe at Home’ with the Network (C9)	222
Stage 2: Implementation	224
Call for participants and community consultations (C10)	224
Call for participants	224
Community consultations	224
Community-wide survey: Gathering baseline data (C11)	228
Sampling for the community-wide survey	230
Development of key themes for the arts-based interventions (C17)	234
Design and conduct of the arts-based interventions (C13)	235
Post-intervention neighbourhood survey (C15)	236
Conclusion	238
Chapter 8	239
Findings: Pre-intervention Survey	239
Pre-intervention community-wide survey	240
Survey distribution and return rates	240
Initial community response to the survey	242
Demographics	245
Perceptions and experience of domestic and family violence	248
Attitudes across the Cessnock LGA	250
Conclusion	254
Chapter 9	255
Findings: Intervention	255
Intervention: Arts-based community development	256
Call for participants	256
Community consultations	257
Complex nature of domestic and family violence	257
Community values	257
Gender issues	258
Recommendations for the project	258
Community development	260
Art outcomes	262
Artworks	262
Art practice as research	263
Practitioner involvement in the ‘Safe at Home’ project	264
Nature of practice	265
Community engagement	266
Artists	266
Social workers	269
Human service (welfare) practitioners	270
Human service (non-welfare) practitioners	272
Talking about domestic and family violence	273
Artists	273
Social workers	273
Human service (welfare) practitioners	273
Human service (non-welfare) practitioners	274
Attitudes	274
Artists	274
Social workers	274
Human service (welfare) practitioners	275
Human service (non-welfare) practitioners	275
Personal networks and prior relationships	275
Artists	275
Social workers	275
Human service (welfare) practitioners	276

Human service (non-welfare) practitioners	276
Fears and concerns	276
Artists	276
Social workers	276
Human service (welfare) practitioners	276
Human service (non-welfare) practitioners	277
Tasks	277
Variation from usual work	281
Artists	281
Social workers	281
Human service (welfare) practitioners	281
Human service (non-welfare) practitioners	281
Influence of external personal factors	282
Artists	282
Social workers	282
Human service (welfare) practitioners	282
Human service (non-welfare) practitioners	282
Leadership	282
Artists	282
Social workers	283
Human service (welfare) practitioners	283
Human service (non-welfare) practitioners	284
Influence of place	284
Conclusion	285
Chapter 10.....	287
Findings: Post–intervention Survey and Discussion	287
Post-intervention neighbourhood survey	288
Survey distribution and return rates	288
Demographics	289
Perceptions and experience of domestic and family violence	292
Attitudes across the Cessnock LGA	293
Survey findings and observations on the art making process and objects	297
Intervention 1: Cut out project	297
Intervention 2: Art for the park	298
Intervention 3: Respect	299
Intervention 4: Posters and coasters campaign	299
Intervention 5: ‘Safe at Home’ hopscotch installation	300
Intervention 6: Weston Safe Families day and activity book	301
Intervention 7: ‘Safe at Home’ snakes and ladders installation	301
Effectiveness of the interventions	302
Contrasting pre- and post-intervention surveys	303
Conclusion	311
Chapter 11.....	312
Discussion and Conclusion	312
Influence of interdisciplinarity	313
Social work IS art	314
Sanctioning the social	316
Artful practice	316
Creative community practice	317
The effectiveness of art in practice	317
Art-based community development as a means of change	318
Changing attitudes regarding domestic and family violence	319
Challenges of measuring arts-based community development	320
Art practice as research	320
Art as knowledge	321
Implications for practice and education	322
Community engagement	322
Practitioner similarities and differences in engagement	323
Similarities	323

Differences	324
Place	325
Ethics	326
Mechanics of arts-based community development	327
Who	327
What.....	327
When.....	328
Where	328
How	329
Implications for research	332
'Safe at Home'	332
Social intervention research.....	332
The art instinct.....	333
References	335
Appendices	368

INDEX OF TABLES

Table 1: Mapping the terrain of art, social work, and social change	30
Table 2: The shared territory of social work and art emanating from the art literature	91
Table 3: Discernible categories within the practice-related literature	110
Table 4: Comparative qualities of the creative social worker	121
Table 5: The empirical and normative paradigms in social work	169
Table 6: Heuristic approach.....	180
Table 7: Phases of the heuristic process (Moustakas, 1990) and how they relate to this study	184
Table 8: Comparing models of social intervention research.....	208
Table 9: Schedule of public consultations.....	225
Table 10: Implemented art interventions.....	226
Table 11: Prevailing community attitudes of concern	234
Table 12: Planned artworks following community consultations.....	237
Table 13: Age range of community-wide survey respondents	245
Table 14: Household constitution.....	246
Table 15: Familial relationships to children	246
Table 16: Respondents by locality across the Local Government Area	247
Table 17: Attitudes to domestic and family violence in the community-wide survey	251
Table 18: Agency involvement	265
Table 19: Practitioner orientation, participation, and level of observation	267
Table 20: Practitioner participation in project tasks	279
Table 21: Age range of neighbourhood survey respondents	291
Table 22: Household composition	291
Table 23: Familial relationships to children	292
Table 24: Attitudes to domestic and family violence the neighbourhood survey.....	295
Table 25: Degree of exposure of interventions	302
Table 26: Degree of change in understanding.....	303
Table 27: Degree of change in attitudes.....	303
Table 28: Comparing respondents to the two surveys.....	304
Table 29: Contrasting attitudes between surveys	307

INDEX OF FIGURES

Figure 1: Revealing art at the heart of social work	26
Figure 2: Barbara Kruger (1992) Girl. Don't die for love , Broadside	70
Figure 3: Jenny Holzer, (1996), You are my own . Photograph, Colour inkjet print on gallery gloss paper, Edition of 100, h: 8.5 x w: 9 in / h: 21.6 x w: 22.9 cm	71
Figure 4: Suzanne Lacy (c. 1996). Cancer notes , Roswell Memorial Cancer Hospital, New York	76
Figure 5: Rachel Whiteread (1993). House , Cast, East London, demolished 1994	77
Figure 6: Lygia Clark (c. 1979-1988) Therapy	80
Figure 7: Lygia Clark (c. 1979-1988) Therapy with stockings	81
Figure 8: Atelier van Lieshout (2001). A-portable: Abortion clinic in a container for Women on Waves .

Amsterdam	84
Figure 9: Suzanne Lacy and collaborators (1993-94). Auto on the edge . (Multiple cities throughout the US, 1993-1994).....	87
Figure 10: Kaprow's (1993) five streams of influence on the development of the avant-garde as art separated from daily lif.....	93
Figure 11: Chronology of ideas about art in social work (Part A)	100
Figure 12: Chronology of ideas about art in social work (Part B)	101
Figure 13: Creative community practices: An umbrella model	153
Figure 14: Cleveland's (2002) ecology of arts-based community development.....	158
Figure 15: The heuristic methodological approach.....	176
Figure 16: Mapping the ideas of mapping for the InSight method	193
Figure 17: Cessnock Local Government Area map	202
Figure 18: Advertisement for call for participants and community consultations.....	224
Figure 19: Article in the Cessnock Advertiser, 2 April 2008.....	231
Figure 20: Article in the Branxton, Greta and Vineyards News , 3 April 2008	232
Figure 21: Community distributed poster encouraging survey return.....	233
Figure 22: Experience of domestic and family violence	248
Figure 23: A community member's sketch made during the consultation process	259
Figure 24: Promotional material accompanying the neighbourhood survey mailout	290
Figure 25: Experience of domestic and family violence in the neighbourhood survey	293
Figure 26: Comparative experiences of domestic and family violence.....	305
Figure 27: Example of conceptual mapping 1.....	418
Figure 28: Example of conceptual mapping 2.....	419
Figure 29: Initial drawings responding to trauma and violence in practice 1	421
Figure 30: Initial drawings responding to trauma and violence in practice 2	421
Figure 31: Initial paintings responding to trauma and violence in practice 1	422
Figure 32: Initial paintings responding to trauma and violence in practice 2	422
Figure 33: Considering domestic and family violence in Collage 1.....	423
Figure 34: Considering domestic and family violence in Collage 2.....	423
Figure 35: From collage to painting 1	424
Figure 36: From collage to painting 2	424
Figure 37: Responding to research data narratives 1.....	425
Figure 38: Responding to research data narratives 2.....	425

INDEX OF APPENDICIES

Appendix A: Ethics approval, participant information statements and consent forms	369
Appendix B: Community-wide survey	401
Appendix C: Neighbourhood survey	406
Appendix D: Community consultation plan.....	411
Appendix E: Example of maps.....	417
Appendix F: Examples of personal artworks	420
Appendix G: Statement of authorship	426

Abstract

Art sits at the heart of social work and is central to social change. This thesis provides a beginning evidence base for this long held disciplinary view by examining the role of art in social change within communities. A shared history and common ground between art and social work was established using mixed methods within a creative heuristic methodology to define art and its relationship to social work. Inspired by the need identified by Hugh England for a theory of social work which incorporated a theory of art, this thesis redefines art in social work, from a bio-ethological perspective against a list of criteria for art, to suggest social work is art. It distinguishes this from the art of social work, which it locates in practice. Situated within the context of community practice, that is, art in community and arts-based community development, this thesis proposes a model of creative community practice able to accommodate both disciplines. Extensive literature findings were examined empirically to ascertain the effectiveness of art as an intervention through the 'Safe at Home' project. This nested study tested the effectiveness of arts-based community development in raising community awareness of and changing attitudes to domestic and family violence within a real-world context, and the implications for practice. This is a unique study in that no empirical research could be found which had been designed to determine if art raises awareness of or changes attitudes to domestic and family violence. Blending art with science, a social intervention research model was used to gather baseline data via a community-wide survey, implement eight art-based interventions using an embedded art practice as research method to collect data, and gather post-intervention data via a neighbourhood survey. Limited to the early phases of the social intervention research process, findings suggest art is not effective in achieving short-term attitudinal change, but establishes a climate conducive to change. The difference between disciplines in community practice centre on ethics and findings support the inclusion of ethics in art education. Findings indicate art is a form of unconscious knowledge which opens the potential for greater understanding of the tacit workings of social work practice.